

National radio programs such as K-LOVE allow US citizens access to specific, targeted programming which is of interest to them. Limiting these programs would not be in the best interest of US citizens.

K-LOVE is, for me personally, uplifting and inspirational. I still have plenty of exposure to local media, regardless of choosing to listen to K-LOVE some of the time.

K-LOVE and other national programs serve the public by allowing them freedom to choose radio programming which is attractive and desirable to themselves.

I hope that FCC will not limit the broadcasting of these national media.

Thank you for your consideration.
